Liberal Leaders Disquieted-The Purpose of

LONDON, Dec. 26 .- Liberal leaders are disquieted because of the feeling exhibited among British non-conformists regarding the interference of the priests in the Kilkenny election. The ferment on the subject seems to be likely to prove greater than that excited by the conduct of Mr. Parnell. Mr. Gladstone himself is and to be slarmed by it, and is believed not improbable that the house of commons will un-

A GRAIN DRILL TRUST.

Some of the Large Concerns Figuring Upon SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, Dec. 26 .- This city is the largest manufacturing center for agricultural machinery in the United States and little else is didate for the Eulgarian throne and would talked of here but the formation of trusts or combines in reapers and other implements. Besides the reaper trust, a threshing machine combine is talked of. One meeting is said to have been held and a company with a capital stock of $20,000,000 proposed.

The latest scheme is a grain drill combine. It is said that a number of the large grain drill concerns in the country are already figuring on the deal. The effect of these trusts will be far reaching and will throw out of work, it is said, 3,000 traveling agents and middlemen, who have been selling agricultural machinery for the various companies. It is estimated that the saving to the harvester trust over the old competitive system is $10,000,000. THE COMMERCE OF THE GULF. A Hearing at the Capitol Today-A National

The Senate committee on commerce today gave a hearing to Mesers. F. L. Dane of Denupon the bill introduced by Senator Cullom to

At the time his the welfare of the west before Congress, but mail. resignation went in his relations with the especially to secure an adequate appropriation President were greatly strained, and they are from Congress to build at least one deep water harbor on the Texas coast of the gulf. Most of the great trunk lines, they said, had connections terminating in the gulf and all other western and southern roads were rapidly building or negotiating for connections. This left but one proposition open for discussion—that of ocean transportation lines to be operated in connection with these great railway systems. The subcommittee was appointed with the special object of establishing a line of steamers to ply between the various ports of the Gulf of Mexico and the ports of Central and South America. The subcommittee told how its members had assembled in Galveston last November and determined to establish such a line, to be owned by the people of the great central basin of the United States who were directly interested in the development of not now cordial, though there is less feeling than there was. Mr. Huston has made arrangeto make it their home until March 4, 1893. This pacification of Mr. Huston is a relief for the President, not only for the reason that he will not now have to select a new treasurer, but because of another thing. Mr. Harrison is considerably interested in the reorganization of the state central committee of Indiana. Upon it depends very largely the question of his renomination. He might be able to secure the renomination with the as-

The incorporators, they said, were men of wealth and high character, with a capital exceeding fifteen million dollars, and it been deemed necessary one hundred incorporators might have been obtained whose combined capital would have exceeded $100,000,000. Congress had established a precedent of the components of the components of the capital would have exceeded $100,000,000. dent for the action asked in the incorporation would probably have been antagonistic to Mr. Harrison's interests.

The deep-water project was justified by innumerable considerations growing out of the re-establishment of our navy, of our probable considerations growing out of the re-establishment of our navy, of our merchant marine and the recommenda-tions of the late Pan-American conference, as well as the recommendations of the President. The subcommittee asked of Congress a national charter, in return for which they promised to build their own ships in the United States at an increased cost of 20 or 30 per cent, fly the flag of our country and in the nation's peril to place their ships at the disposal of the government. HEAVY HOLIDAY MAIL.

THE SULTAN IS A GYMNAST.

He Diets, Behaves Himself and Tries to Become a Man of the World Generally. The Sultan of Turkey lives and thinks pretty much after the fashion of other high European sovereigns, says the New York Sun. He rises very early and takes a cold bath, something unknown to Turkish sultans before his day. At 9:30 o'clock he enters his study and sits down between two mountains of paper; one, all Turkish newspapers and translations from foreign newspapers; the other, documents of state. By his side sits his secretary, Sureya Pasha, with whose aid he goes through all the dailies and clippings and reports. Every state paper is read carefully by the sultan himself, who boasts that he has never affixed his name to a document that he and not first read through. After having disposed of both batches of paper the sultan lunches, plainly and without wine. When the sultan is alone the table service is china; when guests are present it is gold. After luncheon the sultan usually drives or takes gymnastic exrcise. Upon his return from his recreation e again retires to his study and works till ali the tasks of the day have been performed.

The home life of the sultan is strangely diferent from the prevalent ideas of it. Accordng to Vambery, the Hungarian traveler, who has recently returned to his home from a long visit at the Turkish court, the harem has ceased o have any significance for the life of the Turkish sovereign who lives with and loves his one chosen wife as would any other European sovereign. they would be able to negotiate for concessions His affection for this chosen wife is so strong from foreign governments in consideration of their establishing quick and direct communi-cation between their markets and our own. As an Islamite the sultan, of course, allows that female slaves are presented to ham, of the commerce between this country and Central and South America. The committee on commerce has yet taken no action on the but he does not take them into his family in any way, in fact, never sees their faces. Abdul Hamid II is a believing Moslom, Vamberry says, yet never forgets that he rules over Greeks and Armenians as well as over Moham-medans. Not only the clergy of his own creed, but also the Greek and Armenian patriarchs are frequently recipients of his presents. The sultan is far from being an orthodox Mohan-medan, for he encourages the fine arts, has at which, according to the Koran, is a deadly sin, and has laid the basis of the education of of thinking, and pledged themselves a crkish women, for which, too, his creed finds to call a halt in the paralyzing work of religsin, and has laid the basis of the education of of no indorsement. We live in an age of consolidation, and it cer eccentric strokes of the pencil frequently evoke ong legal disquisitions which are not altogether devoid of entertainment. Thus, an illustrated newspaper which maintains a fair artistic reputation has been engaging magisterial attention again by reason of the pictorial vagaries of one of its staff of sketchers. This gentleman published lately a cartoon dedicated to an elderly woman supposed to represent the censorship. "Anastasic," as the ancient female was called, was presented to the public in a peculiar attitude and the artist, together with the manager of the paper, had to appear before the ninth chamber of correctional police in them. The official acting as public prosecutor maintained that the picture was indecent, and pointed to the position of a leg drawn therein.
"That is not a leg, but an arm," answered the artist who drew it, whereupon there ensued a scene almost similar to that which took place of yore, when the famous caricaturist Philipon was summoned for having sketched a "pear," which happened to bear a striking resemblance to the august countenance of his majesty, the legs and arms in profusion with his nimble pen-cil, affirming solemnly that he had intended to portray the opposite of what he was reproached with by the prosecution. Eventually the case was adjourned in order to enable the caricaturist to produce his original design. This clinched

From the Kansas City Times. Mr. James P. Reed, now in this city, is one of the most brilliant checker players in the world, having vanquished, among others, Mr. Charles Barker and the famous "Ajeeb," one of the attractions at the exposition held here in 1889. Of course it is always interesting to read of such men as Prof. Anderson, Paul Morphy, Gunsberg and others noted in the "chess and checker literature" of Europe and America, and besides these two games of chess and checkers are purely games of mental skill. However, it was not our purpose to write a dissertation on the mental discipline of this highly intellectual recreation, but more particularly to call attention to the peculiar character of mind displayed by Mr. Reed in playing ten games at once without ever seeing the boards. He sits with "one, two, three, and so on. If he is to play first he calls his play on board number "one, two, three," and so forth, in their regular numerical order. After a play is called he simply holds that play and position in his mind, and the same is true of all other plays. At any stage in the game he can stop and tell just how the men are placed on any one board or he can go back and trace all the games through from the beginning, or if any one of his opponents has made a different play he will give the proper reply.

SENATORS' CLERKS.

A Lively Fight as to Whether They Shall

There is an interesting little fight going o between the Senate and House over the urgen deficiency appropriation bill, made up princi pally of appropriations for the goverprinting office, and unless the deadlock between the two bodies is broken there may be somewhat of an interruption of work at the government printing office. The Senate added to the bill a provision for he payment of salaries to clerks to Semator

luring the interim between the two sessions

this Congress. The effect of this provision would be indirectly to make clerks to Senators annual instead of session employes. The House refused concurrence in the Senate amendment and the Senate conferees refuse to sign the conference report and permit the other items of appropriation in the bill to become law unless the House yields. The fight is really a contint ation of a struggle between the two bodies last session. The Senate by an amendment to the regular annual appropriation bill made Sens-tors' clerks annual employes, but the House refused concurrence and finally carried its point, the amendment being stricken from the bill. In the closing days of the secsion, however, the Senste passed a simple resolution, to which, of course, the assent of the House was not necessary, providing for the payment of Senators clerks during the recess from the Senate contingent fund. There was no money available in this fund, and it is now sought to increase the fund to the requisite amount by a deficiency appropriation. The House is steadfast in its determination to resist this, and members of its appropriation committee say that such a thing paying regular salaries from a contingent appropriation was never contemplated, and that to permit it would be for the House to abdithe power of scrutinizing and providing for the expenditures of the public monies

Yet 'tis true, 'tie pity, and pity 'tis 'tis true, that about 10 per cent of the people of this country are agnostics that is, they don't know anything about religion except that they don't know. In the Maine state prison there are seventeen religious know-nothings-showing about the same per cent of exclusive self-reliance inside the penitentiary at outside. The vast frittering away of the religious life in modern times on intellectual speculation is almost as unhappy a waste of force as was the frittering away of religious sentiment in the pagan world prior to the founding of Christianity on ceremonial efforts to placate the gods for secu-lar and political advantage. The result in either case is the loss to moral power of the enthusiasm and energy which Christianity exists to develop.
